

ACTION LOOMS IN REFUSAL OF BISHOP CANNON

Senator Borah Promises To Attend Session if Presence
Is Needed

THREE FOR QUORUM

Refusals to Give Additional Information Are
Continued

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(INS)—Action on the refusal of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., to answer questions as to his political work in the 1928 presidential campaign before the Senate Lobby Committee loomed today, when the committee met with a quorum promised.

Until now no action has been taken on the Bishop's refusal, because only two members of the five-man body have attended the hearings. Three are necessary for a quorum.

Today, however, Senator Borah, (R) of Idaho, promised to attend the meeting if his presence was necessary. Senator Caraway, (D) of Arkansas, committee chairman, is absent and Senator Robinson, (R) of Indiana, has indicated he will not attend.

Senator Walsh (D) of Montana, who has been acting chairman, termed Cannon's conduct "indefensible," but conceded no order was possible without a quorum. Only Walsh and Senator Blaine (R) of Wis., have attended thus far.

A quorum of the committee may report Cannon's refusal to answer questions to the Senate, which then could take one of two courses; it could call the Bishop before the bar of the Senate and if he refused to reply impose punishment, or cite him to the District Attorney for contempt of the Senate and direct that he be proceeded against legally on the charge of contempt.

Cannon dispelled doubts as to whether his offer of prepared statements in answer to questions as to his political work constituted refusal to answer when Walsh brought the matter to a flat issue and the witness definitely refused to answer questions.

From this point, he filled the record with refusals, saying merely, "I decline to answer that question and do not admit the jurisdiction of the Committee in the matter." He contended the committee overstepped its authority in asking for information as to his "personal, political activities."

TOM NOONAN'S BROADCAST ENDS FOR SUMMER SEASON; CHECK RESULTS

By Broadcaster

NEW YORK, June 5.—(INS)—The hospital of the air, as Tom Noonan's Sunday afternoon broadcasting from the Chinatown Mission is sometimes called, has completed its winter's work. Now the summer lull gives him a chance to tally the results in the number of wheel chairs, crutches, radios, phonographs and other things which have been distributed over the radio to needy cripples, shutins and others.

The necessary articles are supplied by members of Tom's radio audience who listen-in to the services in the hope that they may be able to help some less fortunate person. This audience stretches out from the Rescue Society at 5 and 7 Doyers street in New York and along the Atlantic coast from Boston to Baltimore through a special five-station hook-up. The services which are conducted by the "Bishop of Chinatown," are non-denominational in every respect and requests and gifts alike are all considered without respect to race, creed or color.

The check-up for the season from September to May shows the following approximate totals: wheel-chairs, 34; crutches, 38 pairs; leg braces and artificial limbs, 30; radios, $1; phonographs, 68; and ear phones, 640. In addition, there have been scores of special gifts of bicycles, baby carriages, canes, pianos, cuckoo clocks, ear-trumpets, pets, toys and clothing.

No important request is sent out as an appeal to the radio audience until it has been investigated by a competent and reliable authority. When medical assistance is required, the case is usually referred to a local institution and where treatment is expensive, gifts of money are often made. In several cases where blood transfusions have been necessary, donors have volunteered to give their blood without cost. In almost every case investigated, the requests have come from persons in real need.

Not all of the appeals which come in to the Chinatown Rescue Mission are for material things. Last winter, one hymn was sung for a young man who was spending his last week in the death house at Sing Sing, and more than one prayer has been said to comfort the widows of police and firemen who had lost their lives on duty. There have been many emergency pleas to broadcast the name of some member of a family who had become estranged or lost touch, to return because a father or mother was dying or was dead. And now and then a message would come from a child pleading for the return of a deserting parent.

One characteristic of the letters which are received at the Chinatown Mission is outstanding. Most of the writers, no matter how grave their own problems are, express a sympathy for others who may be in a similar plight. It is the one thing which seems to bind this unique radio audience together, and many a person who has received help has later repaid the kindness in some other form.

DISAPPOINTMENT CAUSED IN SEVILLE OVER RADIOED REPORTS THAT THE GRAF MIGHT NOT LAND THERE OWING TO BAD WEATHER CONDITIONS

Giant Zeppelin Passes Over Cascaes at 6 A. M., E. D. T.
—Passes Over President's Palace and Proceeds in Southerly Direction Towards Seville

LISBON, PORTUGAL, June 5.—(INS)—The Graf Zeppelin, forging in from the restless Atlantic, passed over Cascaes at 10 a. m. today (6 a. m., E. D. T.).

The big dirigible flew over the President's palace and then proceeded in a southerly direction.

Cascaes is about 30 miles west of Lisbon.

The big dirigible flew over the President's palace and then proceeded in a southerly direction.

This would place the Graf approximately 100 miles off the Portuguese coast to the north and westward of Lisbon.

SEVILLE, June 5.—(INS)—The Graf Zeppelin was forging ahead through heavy rain and wind squalls today, having passed the Azores and pointed towards this old Spanish City.

Great disappointment was caused here by radioed reports from the Zeppelin that she might not land here because of the adverse weather conditions prevailing along the Spanish Atlantic and Mediterranean coasts.

Later dispatches dispelled doubts on the Graf's landing here when Dr. Eckener said that he merely was in doubt as to the time he would reach Seville due to the adverse weather conditions which forced him northward off his direct course from the Azores.

The giant airship was experiencing the smashing challenge of the elements today as she forged ahead on the last lap of her tri-continental flight.

Blasts of wind sent her cavorting upwards, then downwards, as her five motors drove her onward. Her pas-

PETRIFIED ARTICLES IN UNUSUAL COLLECTION

D. C. McDowell, of Sharon,
Spent 18 Months Digging
In Hidden Spot

SNAKE SKIN IMPRINTS

SHARON, Pa., June 5.—One of the most unusual collections known in this vicinity is D. C. McDowell, of Sharon, who owns a collection of petrified articles.

McDowell has spent 18 months digging the articles from a hidden spot in Brookfield township, near here. The location, he believes, at some time thousands of years ago, was a swamp and since that period of time has been covered with matter to a depth of 15 feet.

Included in the collection are stones with heavy imprints of skins of snakes, a stone hand, a snail and a huge frog.

The imprints of the snake skins are similar to those left by a heavily treaded automobile tire. McDowell describes the designs as "intricate and beautiful."

With the exception of a severed thumb, the petrified hand is near perfect in structure and detail. The tip of the broken thumb retains rings which probably were formed by the flesh. In the center of the rings is the bone.

The snail is perhaps the most perfectly preserved article in the collection, while the frog or toad also is easily recognized.

McDowell plans to have a qualified geologist examine the objects to determine whether there is any scientific or monetary value to them.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., June 5.—What is thought to be a state record for high school scholastic honors was established this year by Miss Kathryn Duncan, valedictorian of the 1930 graduating class of Shamokin High School. Miss Duncan completed her senior year studies with an average of 99.55 percent.

Except for a grade of 95 percent in one subject for one month, the girl's marks for the entire term were 100 percent. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duncan, Shamokin.

sengers offered no complaint, reports said, but it seemed certain that during last night there were more comfortable beds than those aboard the Graf.

Herman Cebolla Field, here, where the Graf would land, was beaten by heavy rain and winds of gusty force swept the sea. Similar weather, according to weather bureau reports, swept the Spanish southern coast and extended a hundred or more miles to seaward.

Crowds continued today to follow the progress of the big air liner as she swept on an altered course, according to last minute reports, toward Lisbon. They hoped the airship would make her scheduled return stop here.

Before noon, yesterday, the Graf had passed swiftly over the Azores on her last lap in toward the European coast.

A. O. H. AGAIN RALLY AND DEFEAT RIVALS

For Third Time This Season
Last Inning Tells Tale

SCORE AT END IS 4 TO 3

Schedule For Tonight
CROYDON vs. FEDERALS
Result of Last Night
A. O. H., 4; Independents, 3

By T. M. Juno

For the third time this season the A. O. H. baseball nine rallied in the last inning to beat out the opposing team by one run. Last night the Independents were the victims when they were shaded by the score of 4-3.

Previous to this game the Hibernians made last inning scores against St. Ann's and the Federals to win the games by one run margins. In their opening game the "Hibbies" won by a lone tally so that last night's fray was the fourth that was won by a single run.

The victory puts the A. O. H. team in a tie with the Federals for second place.

"Smokey Joe" Kohler made his first mound appearance of the season and pitched superb ball, holding the "Hibs" to but four hits and should have earned a shut-out victory. His mates, however, did not give him any real support and as a result he was beaten. Five errors were made behind his wonderful pitching.

"Jimmy" Brady caught his usual steady game behind the bat and pitched three base runners trying to steal. Even though he committed two errors, his playing behind the plate was sparkling.

Gene Lawler gave a nice performance of bearing down in the pinches. He was found for nine hits and issued three passes, but when the hits meant runs he was invincible.

"Chuckie" Connors and Joe Stallone worked the best relief, Connors featuring with a running catch and Stallone with several stops.

The Hibernians began in fine fashion, scoring two in the first. Connors singled over first; Kohler tried to catch Connors off first but Romeo missed the ball and Connors took second; Dougherty hit to Tullio who fumbled; Dougherty stole second; Leyden fled to Hibbs; Mangan hit to Romeo who erred, scoring Connors and Dougherty. McGinley was passed but Thompson grounded out to short.

The Independents did not count until the second when a run was pushed over. Hibbs had been put away when Romeo singled over first; Tullio struck out as Romeo stole second; Kohler hit in front of the plate and Brady tried to peg him out but Sullivan missed the throw at first, Romeo counting; Stallone singled to left but Joe Stallone hoisted a fly to Mangan.

The Independents took the lead in the third on a triple by Cochrane, a single by Jones, a sacrifice by Avella and a double by Hibbs. Two runs were scored.

In their last turn with the bat, the Hibernians scored a dual of runs to

LATEST NEWS

PHILADELPHIA, June 5.—(INS)—The bitter battle over the chairmanship of the Republican State Committee between the Vare-Mellon faction and the Grundy-Pinchot followers took a sensational turn today when Judge Harry S. McDewitt sitting in the election court here granted a restraining order preventing the 16 newly-elected Philadelphia members of the State Committee from taking their seats at the organization meeting here on Saturday.

Loss of the 16 votes for Edward C. Martin, the Mellon-Vare candidate for re-election to the post, it is feared will be disastrous for their hopes of success.

S. V. Brown, of Williamsport, is the Pinchot-Grundy candidate for the chairmanship, and loss of the Philadelphia county delegation, Pinchot forces claimed, assured the election of their candidate.

Judge McDewitt's action came as a distinct shock to the Philadelphia organization despite his intimations a few days ago that he would grant a restraining injunction to prevent certification of the Philadelphia vote until all ballots now in dispute had been rechecked.

THE SOAP AGE

Popularization of cleanliness is the purpose of one of the myriad institutes, committees, conferences, associations and societies dedicated to causes, some good and some good-for-nothing. This particular group preaches the gospel of soap and water.

The movement has the backing of health authorities, physicians, educators, along with the manufacturers of soap, for it is admitted that, besides being akin to godliness, cleanliness has important relationship to physical well-being, self-respect and mental and spiritual health.

Advances in cleanliness and sanitation have about run parallel with increasing longevity through the ages. The sixteenth century didn't have much respect for soap, but the average length of human life in the sixteenth century was only about 18 or 20 years. This age, which compared with previous periods of history, might be called the "bathub era," has brought the average length of life to 58 years.

Aside from all this, if Cleanliness Institute succeeds in reducing the number of the unwashed it will, in the opinion of the washed and of mothers, be a worthwhile contribution to civilization.

SPREADING METROPOLIS

Analysis of 1930 census figures proves not that the trend is to the city and from the country nor that it is to the country and from the city, but from both farm and city to the suburb. Suburbs surrounding every city, big and small, are growing at a phenomenal rate and at the expense of the real urban and rural America.

Especially, is the large city slackening in growth, while its suburbs mushroom forth with gains that compare favorably with any recorded for the faster-growing municipalities of smaller size.

This is entirely comprehensible. The motor car, to say nothing of improved transit facilities, has made the city worker independent of the corporate limits, within which he formerly found it convenient, if not necessary, to live. The noise and congestion of his city, its heightened rents and other living costs and his natural "yen" for a plot of ground and the amenities of privacy, have persuaded him to take advantage of his opportunity. The result has been a tendency everywhere to move from the center of the metropolis to its periphery, and thus to cut down the former's count in the current census tabulation.

These facts do not, however, prove that the pull of the urban vortex is diminishing and that the decentralization of population, so long heralded, is setting in. It is only the city's population by night that has fallen off, that by day growing at a rate commensurate with the rapid rise of the suburban population. All those newcomers to suburban settlements have been drawn to them for no other reason than because they are satellites of the larger nucleus.

SYNOPSIS

Dawn, mystery girl, emerges from her sheltered convent to become the principal in a dread African mystery. She is tomorrow to become the mystic bride of the black god Malungu, worshipped by the natives in the jungles near the settlement of the British in their East African Protectorate. Black natives will henceforth look to her when they wish rain and abundance from the god. Dawn is desolate. Tom Allen, her sweetheart, is dismayed upon hearing the tidings. Thrill pipes and tomtoms prelude the ceremony. From all sides natives pour into the clearing for the strange ritual to the new goddess.

INSTALLMENT TWO

Pigeon, disgusted at the ignorance of his companions, turned his attention to the piper. "He's been blowing that bag pipe since sun-up," he complained.

"What's a de mat?" demanded Napoli. "The tune—she's good. Makes me think of de Bellini," he added rapturously, kissing his fingers to the jungle.

"What's all the palaver about?" asked Anzac.

"Eathen 'umbug," said Pigeon shortly. "They're goin' to marry nonplussed, quickly recovered and commanded imperially:

"Speak!"

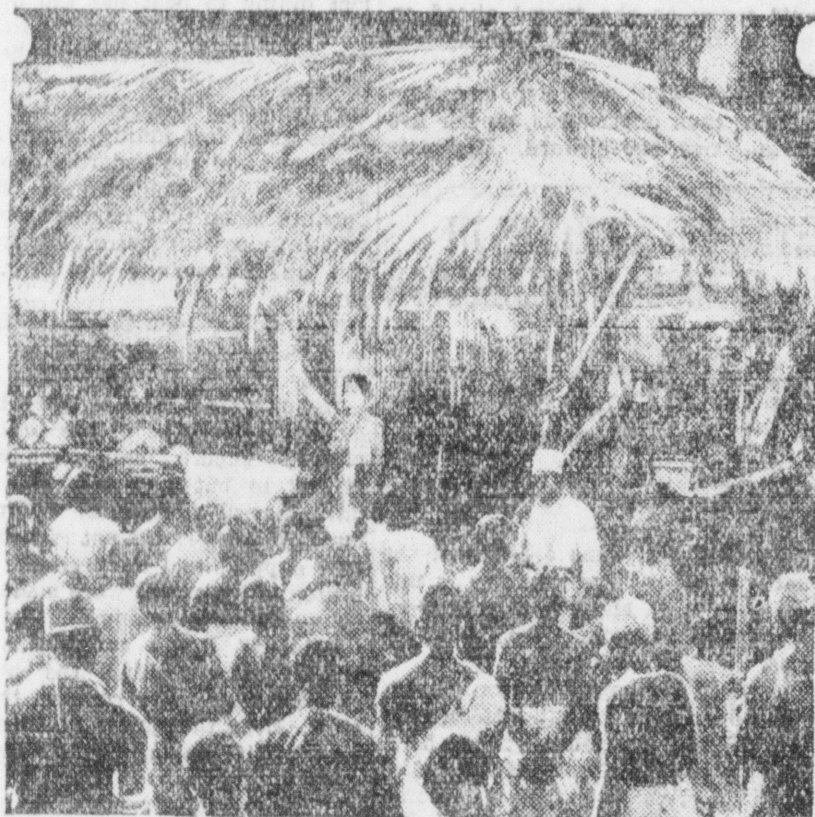

"Hasmali," began the awed runner, "true servant of our African god of gods brings a message from the mighty Malungu."

Mooda's regal manner vanished, and she became a humble subject of Hasmali. "Make way for Hasmali," she commanded, "keeper of Malungu's Sacred Temple."

The natives formed themselves in a semi-circle, their faces turned toward the entrance set apart for Hasmali. The whites on the veranda were impressed to silence by the vociferous sight. They remained quiet as the natives upraised their voices in acclamation of "our Mighty Priest."

Dawn found the sudden quiet after the song almost intolerable. Not even a leaf rustled to puncture a stillness like that which presages a summer hurricane. Then there was a low buzzing sound weighted with excitement. Hasmali and his attendants entered the clearing.

Tall, muscular and sober of face, Hasmali strode to where Mooda stood over the gifts brought to Dawn. The priest gave Mooda no direct greeting, nor did he so much as notice the natives. There was,

The natives assembled to proclaim Dawn their goddess

Mooda's daughter, Dawn, to a god or something."

"A god?" Napoli and Anzac were incredulous.

The Cockney gave vent to a robust snort of disgust. "Another pretty girl gets a wooden image for 'er 'usband."

This announcement gave Anzac, in particular, considerable pause. He signed his drink reflectively and then burst forth irritably. "If we wasn't prisoners in this here place," he exclaimed, "I'd be kidnapping that girl of Mooda's. Is she's a native African, I'm a howlin' Eskimo."

Pigeon laughed cynically. "The natives say she's white," he assured Anzac, "because this 'ere 'eathen god likes 'em that way 'nce in a while."

It was Napoli's eager suggestion that the three of them take advantage of the natives' attendance on the ceremony to escape from the place. Pigeon, first delivering himself of a monologue on the misfortune of being Italian, sarcastically reminded Napoli that escape would involve overcoming such obstacles as German guards on every trail, the swamp, the jungle and the ocean and, perhaps, even the devil himself. Napoli prudently withdrew the motion.

Mooda, meantime, was comforting herself with all the charm that befitted the mother of a goddess. In response to the impassioned intonations of Dawn's future worshippers, she ecstatically bespoke the girl peace and joy.

"Dawn, my little Dawn," she chanted. "Safe in his arms soon you shall be; from life's hot breath forever free. Our goddess, chaste as the snow, only Malungu your charms shall know. Dawn, my little Dawn!"

Upstairs Dawn heard and shuddered. She longed for Tom, just a sight of him, however fleeting. Suddenly she saw, over the gleaming naked backs of the crouching blacks, Tom and his fellow prisoners emerge from the jungle. She saw the group halt as if to decide whether to visit the canteen or proceed direct to their own quarters. A moment later they sauntered toward the canteen, all but Tom, who walked slowly down the pathway beyond Dawn's gaze.

She was recalled to the rites below by a sound that smote her ear like a thunderclap.

"Oh, Mother of Dawn," Gazing down, the girl beheld a breathless runner hurl himself at Mooda's feet. Mooda, for a moment indeed, a trace of contempt for his people in his every gesture. Turning he faced the natives, his hands outstretched.

"I have walked and talked with Malungu," he began, flinging himself into a recitation that catalogued all of the god's kindnesses. Promise of protection from fevers and serpents were delivered to the grateful blacks by the messenger of Malungu who, he added, "is at peace with you all."

Pigeon, finding it somewhat incomprehensible, emitted a Cockney exclamation of skepticism, and retreated into the canteen, Napoli and Anzac accompanying him. The prayer of the natives penetrated the walls of the hut.

"O, Mighty, Malungu," they cried, "we praise you."

"What's 'e talking about?" demanded Pigeon, a contemptuous jerk of his thumb indicating Hasmali. "I'm telling you 'e's been atalkin' with this 'eathen. I don't believe 'im." He summoned a native girl and instructed her to serve himself and friends with something able to dissipate thoughts of Malungu.

Dawn, still crouching in her room above the canteen, was eagerly listening to Hasmali's sing-song message. The frequent outbursts of the natives broke the tread of his announcement, but fragments of it floated up to her. "... honors you above all women ... your daughter for his bride. Long has he waited and watched over Dawn ... seen her white body and the blue of her eyes."

With a muffled cry, Dawn placed her hands over her ears to shut out Hasmali's tormenting words. It availed her nothing. They burned their way into her consciousness—from memory as much as from Hasmali's tongue.

"The sun in her hair and her red-tipped lips."

"Malungu claims her for his bride and ..."

There was another chorus of the natives, a hateful psalm that proclaimed her goddess. She stood over her cot longing for the courage to step before them and denounce their superstitious rites as barbaric. Voices came to her, not the voices of the bewildered blacks, but voices speaking sanely and calmly. She bounded to the doorway and from there saw, to her indescribable relief, Sister Hedwig and Captain Eric. The presence of her white friends gave her a feeling of having been rescued.

Two Boys Meet Death By Drowning in River

Two boys, one from Trenton and the other from Morrisville, were drowned while at play yesterday afternoon.

The first victim, Frederick Felska, 7 years old, of 377 Third Street, Trenton, fell into the Delaware River basin at the Municipal Wharf, and sank to his death before a small companion could summon aid. His body was in the water more than an hour before it was recovered.

The other, Henry P. Harrison, Jr., 13 years old, of West Ferry Road, Morrisville, was drowned when an improvised canoe capsized in the Pennsylvania Canal a short distance above Morrisville. Since he was a good swimmer it is believed he was seized with a cramp after he was plunged into the stream. His body was recovered after a six-hour search.

The Felska boy, a pupil at Mott School, remained at home yesterday because of a lacerated hand. Told that he could go to a moving picture show in the afternoon, he asked if he could visit an aunt on Second Street before he went and he received his mother's consent.

Leaving the house, Frederick met Edward Coughlin, of Huston's Alley, and the two boys went to the Municipal Wharf to play. They had been there but a short time when the Felska lad fell into the stream and young Coughlin gave the alarm. John E. Ball, 19 years old, of 86 Race street, told the police that he saw the youngster, but he was unable to attempt a rescue, because he could not swim.

Young Harrison was in a frail craft with James Crook, about 13 years old, living at Westover, when it capsized. Crook managed to swim ashore.

The two boys secured some boards a short time ago and set about making an improvised boat, about three feet in length and two feet wide. They got in the craft at Black Rock Springs at about 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and started paddling down the canal. A short time later their craft upset.

When young Crook reached the shore he looked about and found his companion missing. An alarm was given and a search begun for the body. Several men dove into the stream while others secured grappling hooks and fishing nets, but it was 10 o'clock last night before the body was finally pulled out in a fishing net.

From Queen to Peddler

Luisa of Tuscany and the Career Which Carried Her from the Throne of Saxony to Selling Laces in the Streets.

KING FREDERICK AUGUSTE

EX-CROWN PRINCE GEORGE

PRINCESS LOUISE & ENRICO TOSSELLI

THE HOTEL AUREOLE AT FIESOLE

Once the reigning beauty and belle of the gay and brilliant court of Vienna, Luisa of Tuscany comes again into the light. From Brussels comes the report that the sixty-year Luisa is now eking out a miserable existence tutoring children and peddling laces from door to door.

her colorful life was made public in 1924 when Crown Prince George, son of the former King of Saxony, became a priest to obtain forgiveness for his mother's sins. The Little Hotel Aureole, Fiesole, (pictured above) where the Crown Princess lived with Enrico Toselli, her second husband.

BRUSSELS, June 5.—Once celebrated as European royalty's most temperamental beauty, Luisa Antonette, of Tuscany, uncrowned Queen of Saxony, now sixty years old, is eking out a miserable existence here tutoring children and peddling laces from door to door.

Luisa, who once threw away the opportunity to become a queen, by eloping with her children's tutor, is said to be writing the story of her madcap experiences which astonished the world decades ago.

When her husband, the Crown Prince, divorced her, Luisa quickly tired of her tutor and married Signor Enrico Toselli, a famous Italian composer and musician of that day.

Rumor said that Luisa chose Toselli as a husband because she had found the decorous court life in Saxony unbearable and wanted to live among the Bohemian folk of the operatic world.

For a time she and Toselli enjoyed an ideally happy life. Though ignored by all her former friends and cut off by her family, Luisa was content with her new husband and the child which blessed their union.

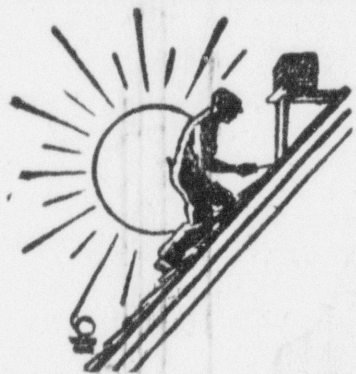

But after a few years Toselli refused to work, preferring to live on his wife's income. They separated and the child was given to its maternal grandparents for rearing.

For a long time Luisa disappeared, but in 1911 a book written by her and telling many secrets about her life as a grand duchess and crown princess created a furore in royal circles.

Her husband, then King of Saxony, was so exasperated that he sought to have her restrained. During the war when the Germans took possession of Belgium, Luisa complained that her Teuton enemies were persecuting her. Unlike her Belgian neighbors, she was not even allowed to leave the narrow confines of the Brussels suburb in which she lived. The German authorities feared, it was said, that she would make further unpleasant revelations about Saxon court life if permitted greater liberty.

In 1924 the world was once more reminded of Luisa's tempestuous career when her 31-year-old son, Prince George of Saxony, announced that he was retiring for life to the ancient abbey of Trebnitz in order to atone for his mother's escapades.

The ex-Crown-Princess, now a peddler and humble tutor, appears to be paying for her indiscretions on her own account.

Notice to William Nelson, Annie Nelson, Elizabeth T. Carver and Robert Tomlinson, their heirs and legal representatives and other parties in interest:

Notice is hereby given that on March 24th, 1930, Lida N. White presented a petition to the Orphans' Court of Bucks County setting forth that she is the owner of a certain messuage and tract of land situated in the Township of Falls, County of Bucks, State of Pennsylvania; that said premises, or a portion thereof, are the same premises which Eliza Neeld by her will dated July 18, 1881, and recorded in Will Book No. 21, page 331, etc., devised unto her two sons, Robert Nelson and Jackson Nelson.

The said Eliza Neeld by the terms of her said will provided for the following legacies:

Elizabeth T. Carver	50.00
Robert Tomlinson	5.00

The said premises devised by the said Eliza Neeld to her sons, Robert Nelson and Jackson Nelson as aforesaid are a part of the premises now owned by the petitioner. There is no release, satisfaction or sufficient discharge of record showing the payment of the said $100.00 to William Nelson, $50.00 to Annie Nelson, $50.00 to Elizabeth T. Carver and $5.00 to Robert Tomlinson.

A period of twenty-one years or more has elapsed since the principal of said charges became due and payable and no payment has been made within said period on account of said charges or any of them by your petitioner or any of her predecessors in title.

The names of all known parties interested in said testamentary charges or legacies are the said William Nelson, Annie Nelson, Elizabeth T. Carver and Robert Tomlinson; and that the names of no other parties interested or their place of residence are known to the petitioner.

The petition filed prayed the Court to grant a citation upon all parties in interest, requiring them to appear in Court on the day designated to show cause why said land should not be discharged from the lien of said testamentary charges or legacies.

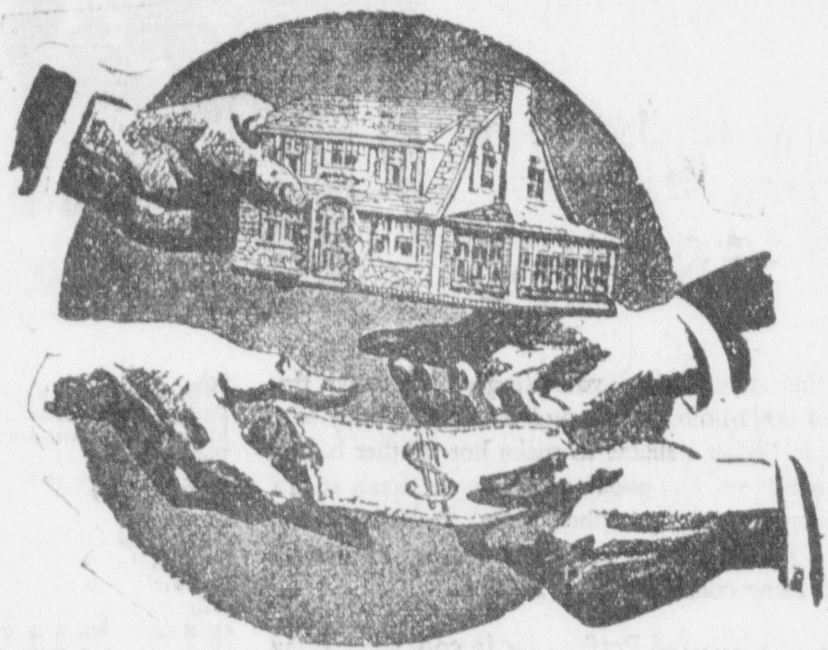

Whereupon the said Court awarded a citation in accordance with the prayer of said petition and the sheriff made due return thereof that the same had not been served because the said parties could not be found and have no known residence.

"I FEEL LIKE A DIFFERENT MAN;" THANKS KONJOLA

Stomach Trouble Readily Yields to Merits of New and Different Medicine

MR. WILLIAM BENTON

"It certainly is a relief to be able to eat without misery," said Mr. William Benton, 375 Bedford Street, Johnston. "For the past three months I suffered from an acid stomach. I had belching spells and bloating after each meal. Pains, heartburn and indigestion were common. I was run-down in general and had little energy or vigor."

"It was a happy day when I started taking Konjola. It went right to work and the first bottle made an improvement. As I continued the treatment, my digestion grew better and better. Today I eat what I please without suffering afterward. In fact I feel like a different person and Konjola gets all the credit."

It is logical to believe that what Konjola has done for others it will do for you—for everyone.

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

Four Local Girls Are

ON BOBBIES' LINE-UP

There promises to be quite a time around Emmie Friday night, when the Emmie Sunday team plays the Philadelphia Bobbie girls. There is quite a bit of interest taken in this girls' team as four local girls are on the line up, Elsie Rockhill, "Bobbie"

Still, "Bobbie" Still and Agnes Robinson, of Morrisville. The girls are really good and are by far the best girls' team that has ever played in this section. They will be opposed by the regulars of Sunday's team, Black, Afflerbach, Comly, Elfrey, Doster, "Schonie" and the rest. If "Dutch" Afflerbach breaks out in his union-all suit and derby hat like he has on former occasions, it will be something the spectators will never forget. The boys are giving a dance after the game in Davis' Hall, where the music will be furnished by Harry Giedlin's orchestra, of Hillwood Inn and Buckingham, which is well known in this vicinity.

LEEDOM'S GET REVENGE WITH BRISTOL "COPS"

(By One of the Players)

Leedom's with a revamped line-up and many of their stars missing, thumped Bristol's minions of the law all over the lot, in the second of a series of baseball games being played between the police and the carpet-makers the other night, the final score being 17 to 7.

The pitching of Vasey, combined with the hitting of Swangler, Elverson and Deitrich, was too much for the Cops, who folded up completely swinging at Vasey's curve ball which was breaking nicely, the big right-hander giving only six hits, Johnny Fields getting three of them. "Artichoke" Arcolesse, who did the mound duty for the Cops, was hammered out of the box by the weavers, who collected 24 hits from him and Bennett who relieved him.

RELIEF FROM CURSE
OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. Charles I. Bowen.—(Adv.)

In a champion it's Self-Reliance

in a cigarette it's Taste

KEEPING ONE'S HEAD — in the flush of the game or in the flush of victory — that's the measure of true sportsmanship.

KEEPING AROMA AND GOOD TASTE in every Chesterfield without loss or variation — that's the simple ABC of Chesterfield's ever-mounting popularity.

MILD, YES—BUT SOMETHING MORE—Chesterfield offers richness, aroma, satisfying flavor — all the result of fine tobaccos, skilfully blended and cross-blended, and all summed up in three words . . . "TASTE above everything".

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield cigarettes are of finer quality and hence of better taste than in any other cigarette at the price. LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.
